

The Lucknow Summit 2025

An International Conference

GEOPOLITICS OF CLIMATE CHANGE (The Genesis of Amplified Ecological Doom Loops)

December 19-21, 2025

Foreign Delegates

Prof. Serenella Iovino

University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill,
USA

James Gordon Hanes Distinguished Professor in Humanities and Professor of Italian Studies and Environmental Humanities

Advisor for Italian Graduate Studies

Department of Romance Studies

Professor of Comparative Literature

Department of English and Comparative Literature

Series Editor, Elements in Environmental Humanities,

Cambridge University Press

Advisory Board PMLA

Prof. Diana J. Fox

Bridgewater State University, MA, USA

Professor and Chair

Anthropology Department

Bridgewater, MA 02325 USA

Founding Editor:

Journal of International Women's Studies

Prof. Emmanuel Picavet

Panthéon-Sorbonne University, Paris, France

Professor of Philosophy (Applied ethics) and a professor of Practical Philosophy at Franche-Comté University in Besançon, France.

He is an international member of the University of Montreal's research center in ethics. E. Picavet is a member of the Bureau of the Société Française de Philosophie, in charge of the international relations, and France's delegate to the Steering Board (Comité directeur) of the Fédération Internationale des Sociétés de Philosophie (FISP)

Prof. Reinhard Hennig

University of Agder, Norway

Professor of Nordic literature with a research focus on Ecocriticism and interdisciplinary environmental humanities. He is former president of the European Association for the Study of Literature, Culture and co-founder and coordinator of the Ecocritical Network for Scandinavian Studies (ENSCAN).

Prof. Gabriel Arnou-Laujeac

Paris Institute of Political Science,
France (Sciences Po Paris)

He is a political adviser, philosopher and poet whose work engages Indian philosophy, with a focus on Advaita Vedānta and public ethics.

He is currently completing a book on classical Indian philosophy (Les Deux Océans) and a book-length prose poem on the sea.

Prof. Andrea Lavazza

University of Milan, Italy

Neuroscientist and a senior research fellow in Neuroethics at the Centro Universitario Internazionale, Arezzo, Italy, and adjunct professor in Neuroethics and Philosophy of Mind at the Milan University and Pavia University, Italy. His research focuses on moral philosophy, cognitive neuroscience, and new technologies including AI and neurotechnologies. Lavazza has published 15 books as an author or editor, and over 130 scientific papers in peer-reviewed journals.

Beatrice Pedretti

Researcher, University of Milan, Italy

She is working at the intersection of neuroscience, neuropsychology, and climate change. Her work examines the psychological and cognitive consequences of extreme climate events, combining quantitative neuropsychological methods with psychosocial frameworks to inform evidence-based, people-centred responses. International experience on Just Transition and ESG communication includes coordination of global projects and organisation of panels with philanthropic and policy partners.

Dr. H. M. B. S. Herath

University of Sri Jayewardenepura, Nugegoda, Sri Lanka

HoD, Department of Geography

Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences

Prof. Umesh Kumar Mandal

Tribhuvan University, Kathmandu, Nepal

Head of Central Department of Geography

An Agroecologist and Ex-Executive Director of Research Directorate
Rector Office at Tribhuvan University

Prof. Heide Estes

Monmouth University, New Jersey, USA

She is Professor Emerita at Monmouth University and has held research and teaching appointments at New York University, the University of Bonn, and Clare College, University of Cambridge.

She is a founding editor of Medieval Ecocriticisms (Medieval Institute Publications / De Gruyter, 2021-).

Prof. Jonathan Pugh

Newcastle University, UK

Island Studies, Department of Geography

His research is particularly noted for his work on the 'relational' and 'archipelagic' turns in island studies, disrupting the figure of the insular island. He has held a number of visiting fellowships, given international keynote addresses, and/or invited lectures, including at Princeton, Harvard, Virginia Tech, London, Cornell, Vienna, Zurich, Trinity College Dublin, Rutgers, California, University of West Indies and National Taiwan Normal University.

Dr. Fazila Derya Agis

Ankara University, Türkiye

She is an interdisciplinary scholar whose work bridges environmental humanities, linguistics, and cultural anthropology. She holds a Ph.D. in Italian Language and Literature from Ankara University, alongside advanced degrees in Social Anthropology and English Linguistics. Her academic journey includes post-graduate training in literary translation at the University of Bari and research affiliations with institutions such as the Hadassah-Brandeis Institute at Brandeis University.

Hayet Haj Khilil

Tunis, Tunisia

An Eco-poet and Environmentalist

Hayet Haj Khilil is a Tunisian author, poet, and photographer, also known by the pen name Cygne de Vie. She teaches at Lycée Rue Imam Moslem Elmenzeh 1, Tunis, Ministry of Education, Tunisia.